Vorwort

Als Opernkomponist feierte Niccolò Jommelli europaweit Erfolge, aber er komponierte Zeit seines Lebens auch Kirchenmusik. Die Missa pro defunctis entstand 1756 während seiner Tätigkeit in Stuttgart für die Beisetzung der Herzogin Maria Augusta, Mutter des regierenden Herzogs Carl Eugen. Dessen Amtszeit gilt als Höhepunkt des kulturellen Lebens am Württembergischen Hof und fiel zugleich in die rund 60-jährige Phase des Summepiskopats, als katholische Regenten an der Spitze des evangelischen Herzogtums standen und eine katholische Requiemvertonung nicht ohne weiteres zur Aufführung kommen konnte.¹

Seit 1733 musste der Landesherr in den sogenannten Religionsversalien gegenüber den württembergischen Landständen die ausschließliche Geltung der evangelischen Konfession garantieren. Nur besondere höfische Ereignisse, nicht jedoch Kirchenfeste, ermöglichten die Aufführung katholischer Kirchenmusik. Eine der wenigen Gelegenheiten ergab sich beim Tod der Herzoginmutter, Maria Augusta von Württemberg (1706–1756), eine geborene Prinzessin von Thurn und Taxis, muss eine sehr willensstarke und kluge Frau gewesen sein. Nach dem Regierungsantritt des erst 16-jährigen Carl Eugen kam es 1750 zu einem heftigen Streit zwischen Maria Augusta und ihrem Sohn, der sie daraufhin in Verwahrung nehmen ließ. Abgeschirmt und unter militärischer Bewachung verbrachte sie ihre letzten Lebensjahre im Göppinger Schloss. Maria Augusta starb am 1. Februar 1756 „unvermutet an einem Schlagfluß“. Was sich nun innerhalb weniger Tage bis zur Beisetzung am 9. Februar abspielte, ist detailliert überliefert. Bereits einen Tag nach dem Tod wurde für die Dauer von sechs Wochen eine Landestrauer ausgerufen. Carl Eugen gab den Auftrag zur Komposition des Requiems, für das dem Komponisten nur wenig Zeit blieb.²

Der Leichenzug am Tag der Beisetzung begann früh morgens unter großer Anteilnahme der Bevölkerung. Der von Pferden gezogene Leichenwagen nahm seinen Weg auf der Strecke von rund 50 km über Göppingen und Esslingen und traf um 18 Uhr in Ludwigsburg ein. Eine Stunde später begann der Leichenkondukt über den Schlosshof, der von zahlreichen Fackelträgern begleitet wurde. Am Eingang zur Kapelle³ fand die Einsegnung statt, anschließend wurde der Sarg in das mit zahlreichen Wachslichtern beleuchtete, pyramidenförmige Castrum doloris gestellt, das sich in der Mitte des Kirchenraumes befand. Im Obergeschoss, vis-à-vis des Fürstenstandes, fanden auf der südlichen Orgelempore die Musiker Platz.

„Aldann wurde das Officium defunctorum, hernach eine Trauer-Musique gehalten und nach nochmahls verrichtetem Gebett und Einseegnen der Fürstl. Sarg in die Grufft eingesencket. Worauf der Fürstl. Leichen-Conduct wiederum in vorbemeldter Ordnung nach dem alten Corps de Logis zuruck gieng.“⁴

Das Ensemble, das das Requiem aufführte, bestand aus acht Sängern und zehn Instrumentalisten der Hof- und Kammermusik, Orgel spielte aller Wahrscheinlichkeit nach Kapellmeister Jommelli. Die Sopranistin Marianne Pirker war die einzige Frau unter den aus Italien, Süddeutschland und Österreich stammenden Musikern. Sie bestritt die Aufführung zusammen mit drei Kastraten sowie den Männerstimmen des Chores und den Instrumentalisten.

Die vorliegende Komposition umfasst genau genommen zwei Werke: Die Totenmesse (Missa pro defunctis), die mit der Absolution endet, und das danach erklingende Responsorium „Libera me“, das zum Beerdigungsritus gehört.⁵ Die Sätze der liturgischen Abschnitte sind überwiegend durchkomponiert, mit einem attaca-Übergang zwischen Agnus Dei und Communio, wie er für neapolitanische Requiemvertonungen typisch ist.

Jommelli überarbeitete für die Missa pro defunctis drei Sätze aus früheren Kompositionen. Außerdem übernahm er Fugenthemen oder Motive aus seinen älteren geistlichen Werken. Bei den Abschnitten des Requiems mit gemeinsamer textlicher Basis gibt es sowohl wörtliche Wiederholungen (Quam olim, Hosanna, Quando caeli) als auch variierte Repliken (Requiem aeternam, Kyrie, Dum veneris). Im Hinblick auf die Instrumentierung fallen geteilte Bratschen und eine oft eigenständige Führung der Violinen auf. Als typisch neapolitanische Stilmittel können die Mischung von Sätzen mit Solo/Tutti-Wechseln mit drei Solonummern (Benedictus, Tremens, Dies illa), die zweiteilige Arienform und das Nebeneinander von Polyphonie im stile antico mit belcanto-gefärbten, homophonen Abschnitten gelten. Charakteristisch ist auch die Verwendung langer Haltetöne, entweder durch alle Stimmen wandernd in den Fugen (z.B. Pie Jesu Takt 1–7ff., Dona eis requiem Takt 4–8ff.) oder bevorzugt in Alt und Bass zur Textausdeutung (z.B. Requiem aeternam Takt 20–26 „lux perpetua“, Salva me Takt 1–6, 194–199 „Salva me“/„voca me“, Libera eas Takt 17–21 „obscuro“) bzw. als Orgelpunkt im Bass (Kyrie (II) Takt 22–30).

Im Responsorium scheint Jommelli die Coda „per Fine“ des Dum veneris, die im Nichts verklingt, gleichsam als Sinnbild des Verstummens oder Verscheidens gestaltet zu haben.⁶ Der rhythmische Puls in der 12-taktigen Verlängerung ähnelt dem daktylischen Streichermetrum des Beginns, ohne einen direkten Bogen zum Anfang des Werks zu schlagen.

⁴ Stuttgartsches Ordinari Dienstags-Journal Nr. 14 vom 17.2.1756; zit. nach Schmid, Hofzeremoniell, S. 21.

Bei Requiemvertonungen in Süddeutschland ist im 18. Jahrhundert in der Regel ein auskomponierter Introitus-Vers „Te decet hymnus“ vorhanden. Von Jommelli liegt aber keine entsprechende Vertonung vor. Das Einschleichen eines einstimmigen Verses scheint aufgrund des Quellenbefunds⁷ und aufgrund von Parallelen im Dresdner Repertoire⁸ der Aufführung durch Jommelli mutmaßlich am nächsten zu kommen. Da mancherorts die Praxis den Vers „choraliter“ vorzutragen offenbar unbekannt oder unerwünscht war, fügen einige Abschriften des Jommelli-Requiem eine mehrstimmige, instrumentalbegleitete Vertonung von Nicola Sala (1713–1801) ein, und zwar stets zusammen mit dem Gradual-Vers „In memoria aeterna“. Diese beiden Alternativen wurden in den Anhang der vorliegenden Ausgabe aufgenommen.

Nach der Aufführung in Ludwigsburg verbreitete sich die Missa pro defunctis rasch in ganz Europa. Sie gehörte zu den meistgespielten Totenmessen in der zweiten Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts, bis sie durch Mozarts Requiem in den Hintergrund gedrängt wurde. Neben der Paraphrase des 50. Psalms „Pietà Signore“ (1774) war sie wohl Jommellis bekannteste Komposition. Verschiedene Komponisten versuchten, zu der reinen Streicherbegleitung später Bläserstimmen hinzu zu komponieren.

Johann Adam Hiller urteilte 1784 in seinen Lebensbeschreibungen berühmter Musikgelehrten und Tonkünstler neuerer Zeit:

„Noch ist von ihm [Jommelli] ein Requiem oder Todtenmesse bekannt, die in allem Betracht für ein Meisterstück gelten kann. Der edelste, rührendste Gesang, voll Ausdruck und Würde, durch kein Geräusch der Instrumente unterdrückt, auch durch keine gewaltsamen und allzu kühnen Modulationen verdunkelt, sind das Eigenthümliche dieser vortrefflichen Musik.“⁹

Und Christian Friedrich Daniel Schubart, der das Requiem „unter die ersten Meisterwerke dieser Art“ zählte, versah das Werk mit einem deutschen Singtext „um diß herrliche Stük auch für die Protestanten brauchbar zu machen“.¹⁰ Im Druck erschien die Missa pro defunctis erstmals ca. 1810 bei Leduc in Paris.

Foreword

Niccolò Jommelli was successful as an opera composer all over Europe, but he also composed church music throughout his life. He composed the Missa pro defunctis in 1756 during his time in Stuttgart, for the funeral of Duchess Maria Augusta, mother of the reigning Duke Charles Eugene. His term of office is regarded as the high point of cultural life at the Württemberg court; at the same time, it fell into the 60-year phase of the summepiscopate, when Catholic rulers stood at the head of the Protestant duchy and a Catholic requiem setting could not easily be performed.¹

Since 1733 the sovereign had to guarantee the exclusive validity of the Protestant denomination to the Württemberg estates in the so-called religious Reversalien. The performance of Catholic church music was only possible at special court events, but not on ecclesiastical feast days. One of the few opportunities arose on the death of the Dowager Duchess Maria Augusta von Württemberg (1706–1756), born a Princess of Thurn and Taxis, must have been a very strong-willed and shrewd woman. In 1750, after Charles Eugene took office at the age of only 16, there was a fierce dispute between Maria Augusta and her son, who then caused her to be taken into custody. Isolated and under military guard, she spent the last years of her life in Göppingen Castle. Maria Augusta died on 1 February 1756, “unexpectedly from a stroke.” The events that took place within the few days until the funeral on 9 February have been documented in detail. Already one day after the death, a six-week period of national mourning was proclaimed. Charles Eugene commissioned the composition of the Requiem, which gave the composer very little time to complete it.²

The funeral cortège began early in the morning on the day of the interment, with great involvement of the population. The hearse, pulled by horses, made its way along the 50 km stretch via Göppingen and Esslingen and arrived in Ludwigsburg at 6 pm. One hour later, the funeral procession which was accompanied by numerous torchbearers began crossing the courtyard. The consecration took place at the entrance to the chapel³; then the coffin was placed in the pyramid-shaped castrum doloris, which was located in the middle of the church and illuminated by numerous wax lights. On the upper floor, opposite the ducal gallery, there was room for the musicians on the southern organ gallery.

“Then the Officium defunctorum was conducted, followed by a mourning music, and after further prayer and the blessing, the ducal coffin was lowered into the crypt. Whereupon the ducal funeral procession returned to the old corps de logis (main building) in predetermined order."⁴

The ensemble for the performance of the requiem consisted of eight singers and ten instrumentalists from the Court and Chamber Music; the organ was probably played by Kapellmeister Jommelli. The soprano Marianne Pirker was the only woman among the musicians who came from Italy, southern Germany and Austria; she performed together with three castrati as well as the male voices of the choir and the instrumentalists.

The present composition comprises two works: The Mass of the Dead (Missa pro defunctis), which ends with absolution, and the subsequent responsory "Libera me," which is part of the funeral rite.⁵ The movements of the liturgical sections are predominantly throughcomposed, with an attacca transition between Agnus Dei and Communio, as is typical for Neapolitan requiems.

Jommelli revised three movements from earlier compositions for the Missa pro defunctis. He also adopted fugue themes or motives from his older sacred works. The sections of the Requiem with a common textual basis contain both literal repetitions (Quam olim, Hosanna, Quando caeli) and varied replies (Requiem aeternam, Kyrie, Dum veneris). Remarkable in terms of instrumentation is the division of the violas and the frequent independent voicing of the violins. Typical Neapolitan stylistic elements are the alternation of movements with solo/tutti changes with three solo numbers (Benedictus, Tremens, Dies illa), the two-part aria form and the juxtaposition of polyphony in stile antico with bel canto-colored, homophonic sections. Also characteristic is the use of long held notes, either moving through all the voices in the fugues (e.g., Pie Jesu mm. 1–7ff., Dona eis requiem mm. 4–8ff.), or preferably in alto and bass for the purpose of text exegesis (e.g., Requiem aeternam mm. 20–26 "lux perpetua," Salva me mm. 1–6, 194–199 "Salva me"/"voca me," Libera eas mm. 17–21 "obscurum") or as a pedal point in the bass (Kyrie (II) mm. 22–30).

In the responsory Jommelli seems to have designed the coda "per Fine" of the Dum veneris, which fades away into nothingness, as a symbol of falling silent or of dying, as it were.⁶ The rhythmic pulse in the 12-bar extension resembles the dactylic string meter of the beginning, without, however, making a direct connection to the beginning of the work.

In the 18th century, a composed introit verse "Te decet hymnus" is usually found in requiems set to music in southern Germany. However, there is no corresponding setting by Jommelli. The insertion of a monophonic verse would seem to come closest to Jommelli's performance by reason of the source findings⁷ and parallels in the Dresden repertoire.⁸ Since in some places the practice of performing the verse "choraliter" was apparently unknown or undesirable, some copies of the Jommelli Requiem include a setting for several voices with instrumental accompaniment by Nicola Sala (1713–1801), always coupled with the gradual verse "In memoria aeterna". These two alternative movements have been included in the appendix to the present edition.

After the performance in Ludwigsburg, the Missa pro defunctis quickly spread throughout Europe. It was one of the most frequently performed masses for the dead in the second half of the 18th century, until it was relegated to the background by Mozart's Requiem. Besides the paraphrase of the 50th Psalm "Pietà Signore" (1774), it was probably Jommelli's most famous composition. Several composers also attempted to compose wind instruments in addition to the purely string accompaniment.

In 1784, Johann Adam Hiller remarked in his Lebensbeschreibungen berühmter Musikgelehrten und Tonkünstler neuerer Zeit:

"Furthermore, by him [Jommelli] a requiem or death mass is known which in all respects can be regarded as a masterpiece. The noblest, most moving singing, full of expression and dignity, not oppressed by any noise from the instruments, nor darkened by any violent and all too bold modulations, are the characteristics of this exquisite music."⁹

And Christian Friedrich Daniel Schubart, who counted the Requiem "among the prime masterpieces of its kind," provided the work with a German singing translation "in order to make the wonderful piece usable also for Protestants."¹⁰ The Missa pro defunctis was published in print for the first time around 1810 by Leduc in Paris.

⁴ Stuttgartsches Ordinarium Dienstags-Journal no. 14 dated 17 February 1756; quoted from Schmid, Hofzeremoniell, p. 21.

⁶ Curiously enough, this extension of the Dum veneris is missing in some of the copies as well as in the first print.

⁷ In the main source of the work a possibly only loosely inserted page of music following the introitus seems to be missing, the contents of which are in turn preserved in a secondary source (Source C). For this reason, the introit verse is inserted according to Source C in the present edition.

⁸ Cf. the more detailed foreword in the full score (Carus 27.321).

25. Libera me (Soli SSA o SA e Coro)

Adagio assai

The musical score is written for Soprano I, Soprano II (Alto), and piano accompaniment. It begins with a 'Solo' section for Soprano I and Soprano II, who sing 'Li - be - ra,'. The piano accompaniment features dynamic markings of f and p. The score then transitions to a 'Tutti' section where all parts sing together. The lyrics are: 'li - be - ra me, Do - mi - ne, Do - mi - ne, li - be - ra, li - be - ra me, li - be - ra, li - be - ra'. The piano accompaniment continues with f and p dynamics. A large watermark 'CARUS' is overlaid on the score. The score concludes with a 'Solo' section for Soprano I and Soprano II, who sing 'mor - te, de - mor - te ae - ter - me, de mor - te, de mor - te ae - ter - me,'. The piano accompaniment ends with a final chord.
