NOTE

The first dated scores containing clarinet parts were those of the works by Melchior Molter (1734). According to the Dublin Mercury, a Hornpipe for clarinet concerto in Dublin in 1742, and it is possible that Handel heard Molter's concerto and composed a concerto for clarinet about the year 1745.

Military bands in France and England seem to have used the clarinet in concert with the oboes. Had Handel come across one of these bands and written scores for two clarinets and horn? We cannot be certain, but it is very likely that he did, and the idea of using more than one player to each part, as in the military bands, was probably the source of his inspiration.

The Andante-Allegro contains material which is to be found also in the 'Entry of the Queen of Sheba,' and this dates the work as having been written before 1745.

This unique piece is preserved in Handel's copy book in the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge, but copies are in existence of three other parts written in Handel's handwriting, the marking of the parts for Clarinet, Bassoon, and Horn in the hand of Antonius. The parts are untransposed, but the strings were transposed up a fifth. The bassoon part, also in D, was obviously intended to sound an octave lower than written. There are no random marks of any kind in the score, and every note is clearly marked.

We are grateful to the Director and the Trustees of the Society of the Friends of the Fitzwilliam Museum to publish this score.

A musical score page showing three staves of music. The top staff uses a treble clef and has a dynamic marking of 'f' (fortissimo). The middle staff uses a bass clef and also has a dynamic marking of 'f'. The bottom staff uses a bass clef and has a dynamic marking of 'f'. Each staff contains a series of sixteenth-note patterns, primarily consisting of eighth-note pairs and sixteenth-note chords.

A black and white photograph of a page from a piano sheet music book. The page contains musical notation on five staves. The first staff begins with a dynamic marking of mp. The second staff starts with a dynamic of f, followed by a tempo marking of MPRAC. The third staff has a dynamic of p and a tempo marking of mf. The fourth staff starts with a dynamic of p. The fifth staff ends with a dynamic of mp. Large, semi-transparent text is overlaid on the music: the word "PREVIEW" is written diagonally across the top half of the page, and the words "Low Resolution" are written diagonally across the bottom half of the page.

A page of sheet music for a musical instrument, likely a woodwind or brass. The music is in common time and consists of six staves of five-line staff paper. The key signature changes between staves. Measure numbers 50, 51, and 52 are visible above the staves. Dynamic markings include mp, cresc., creac., p, mf, ff, and mf cresc.. A large, semi-transparent watermark reading "PREVIEW" and "Low Resolution" diagonally across the page is overlaid on the music.
