PRÉFACE

La présente édition tente de résoudre un problème et de concilier les exigences posées par l'établissement d'un texte authentique, où les intentions du compositeur relatives à l'exécution ne sont que suggérées, et, d'autre part, celles d'une édition revue et corrigée, qui omet de mentionner telles additions ou modifications importantes.

Le texte authentique de Beethoven, sans nulle addition (ni la moindre suppression de plume ou autres erreurs manifestes) est reproduit dans la partie de violon de la réduction pour piano, alors que la partie de violon séparée, qui présente les modifications. Une simple comparaison des deux versions fera donc facilement saisir les différences.

A quelques exceptions près, Beethoven a laissé la part au violon de la notation des indications dynamiques, tandis que celle-ci sont portées de façon précise sur les parties de piano. Les indications dynamiques suggérées ici pour la partie de violon sont donc de celles portées par Beethoven lui-même dans les autres parties de son œuvre, de celles qu'il a toujours pris soin de préciser pour l'orchestre, et non de celles qui se bornent à un simple rôle d'accompagnement.

Exception faite des liaisons, l'original ne présente pas de liaisons de cette édition sont ajoutés par l'éditeur.

PREFACE

This edition is an attempt to solve the problem presented on the one hand by an original text which, as it stands, provides only a bare outline of the composer's ideas of instrument execution and on the other by an edition which fails to indicate where important additions and modifications have been made.

Beethoven's original text, without any editorial modifications (and keeping even the errors of the Mss.), is preserved in the violin part of the present piano and violin edition. A separate violin part is an edited version. The differences between the two are indicated in the text.

Beethoven left the Solo part, with few exceptions, dynamically unmarked. The violin parts show clearer indications. The editor is based on the Dynamics in the violin parts. In addition on the one hand on Beethoven's own markings in the piano parts, and on the other on the Dynamics, which the composer marked for the piano parts, in the case of pure accompaniment.

Apart from ties, the original shows only phrasing marks, and these are preserved in the present edition are by the editor.

-  Slur over note, but slightly detached
-  Slur over note as staccato (Martelé)
-  Slur over note as staccato, but longer than - without —
-  Slur over note as staccato on the string (Spiccato or Sautillé)
-  Slur over note off the string, but longer than - without —
-  Dot outside slur means abatement of that particular note, without stopping before this note
-  Dot inside slur means stopping before that note, in the first instance by lifting the bow, in the second on the string
-  () All dynamics between half-circular brackets are editorial
-  | } Fingering and bowings between these brackets are alternative suggestions
